Cotton RECYCLED

This fabric is obtained from remains of clothing manufacturing, or already used garments. Most of it comes from post-industrial origin, due to the remains that factories produce and that, otherwise, would be discarded. Recycled cotton is considered one of the most sustainable textile fibers, since it does not require cultivation soil or large amounts of water for its manufacture.

Betting on recycled cotton is betting on the preservation of the environment, and on a responsible use of resources.

Made in EUROPE

Cotton is the most natural fabric that exists and also the most used. This is because it is a natural material which has countless advantages, such as its ability to control moisture, insulate and provide comfort, in addition to being hypoallergenic and exceptionally resistant.

We bet on a more sustainable manufacturing, working with three different types of cotton, fully certified and produce in Europe in order to reduce environmental impact that comes from transports and production.
